46 rooms with
Lone Star Style: Austin cool,
Houston bold, and Dallas chic

Music room Paintings of 1970s-era Led Zeppelin top the glass wall that opens to the wine room. On the opposite wall (below) classic-rock album covers are framed by paneled walls painted in Sherwin-Williams' "Pewter Cast." Cube tables are from Century. Exterior The patio home is part of a small Houston development. Preceding pages Antique French doors connect the music room and foyer. A dining room chandelier is from Bliss Studio. Paintings of The Beatles accent the staircase wall.

DRESSED impeccably in suit and tie with neatly coiffed white hair, Jim Stein looks every bit the banking executive that he is. But then there's the Led Zeppelin-, Stevie Ray Vaughan-, Beatles-loving Jim who cranks up the stereo so loud it rattles the walls of his elegant Houston patio home.

Interior designer Julie Dodson tuned into those diverse personality qualities and quirks while helping Jim plan and furnish his new 5,800-square-foot home. "Jim is just so cool," says Dodson. "He's as structured as you expect a banker to be, but he loves classic rock. He has a vinyl collection that's insane."

He's also an eighth-generation Texan and a proud and loving father of three daughters. The oldest, Jamie Safier, is married; the two younger girls, Jordan, 13, and Jade, 11, live with him part-time. "They're the cutest kids ever!" he boasts.

Jim bought the three-level stucco home midway through construction, allowing him and Dodson to alter the floor plans and upgrade materials and finishes. One of the first improvements was
